Abstract:

Nihilism or nothingness is against the meaningfulness of life. Meaningfulness means valuing and valuing, and when it is associated with life, it means valuing and valuing life, and if human life has real positive value and is for his good, it is meaningful.

Philosophically, nihilism is any view that rejects the existence of an objective basis for the human value system. In fact, the main claim of nihilism is that what essentially makes a life meaningful is not attainable for any of us. In Tadeusz Metz's article, published in the Stanford Philosophical Encyclopedia, various nihilistic approaches have been proposed after presenting major views on the meaning of life. In this article, we decided to extract these approaches and after analyzing and explaining each one, we criticized them and provided the necessary answers using the scientific and philosophical views of some philosophers and scientists of the world, especially relying on To present the basics of Islamic thought.

Keywords: Nihilism; The meaning of life; objectivity; Moral Values.
